About the Programme

Objective:

The city is a familiar place for all the students, with its streets, people, traffic, infrastructure and its changing landscape. The changes to the city are a result of a kind of development envisioned and put into place by those who have the power to influence it. But the city is inhabited and owned by all of its people. This film takes us through a journey of the changes in Bangalore between 2005-10. And examines the question of urbanization, development and its impact on the people's life, the ecology of the city and its economy. An introduction to anthropology as a way to understand our social and physical landscape.

Learning outcome:

To understand the changing city, its politics of development and how it affects all kinds of people deeply and how architecture is embedded in this development.

Activities held:

Film Screening, Discussion and Question answer Session.

List of Resource Persons:

1.	Dr.Usha Rao
Multimedia artist & cultural researcher	Contact information MAIL : touch@hundredhands.com
Usha Rao is intrigued by cities and what they mean to people. Over the past decade she has attempted to make sense of what is now famously understood as ‘the transformation’ of Bangalore. She is particularly interested in tracing the processes and practices that bring about change in the way a city is imagined and ‘the city’ is fashioned. Her current research and media projects looks at neighborhoods in Bangalore because she feels that’s where ‘the city’ is lived. Our Metropolis (2014) which she has co-directed with film maker Gautam Sonti (www.ourmetropolis.in) is her first documentary film. The film has been shown in major festivals including MIFF, Busan International Festival, and Dubai International Film Festival.
