| REPRESENTATIVES FEEDBACK | The speakers from KPMG were really energetic and engaging throughout their session. There were many points about virtual teaching and learning, which were new to faculties and useful in application for the online classes. Overall it was an eye opener for better student engagement during the online class and even many of the faculties felt that the session would have been organized before the starting of online classes for students. |
| EVENT OUTCOME | <ul style="list-style-type: none">- Implementing new strategies in virtual sessions which are interesting and unique- Making use of design thinking.- Coming up with new ideas which explore innovativeness.- Various principle and practices for student engagement in virtual sessions. |
